WHY UNDERSTANDING
The Real Estate Market Matters

Understanding the real estate market is crucial for anyone involved in buying, selling, or investing in property. The market fluctuates based on a variety of factors such as interest rates, supply and demand, economic trends, and local conditions. Having a solid grasp of these dynamics allows you to make informed decisions, whether you're navigating a competitive buyer's market or preparing to sell your property at its peak value. By staying updated on market trends, like those in Eastside Vancouver for January 2025, you can better predict price movements, identify investment opportunities, and minimize risks, ensuring your real estate decisions align with current market conditions and future forecasts.

Erin Price Emery, Founder of The Collective Real Estate Team, is more than just a real estate agent—she's a visionary leader with over a decade of experience. Known for her business acumen, negotiation expertise, and personalized approach, Erin is dedicated to putting her clients' needs first. With a foundation built on transparency, honesty, and a relentless work ethic, she ensures every real estate journey is seamless and successful.

Buying with Erin

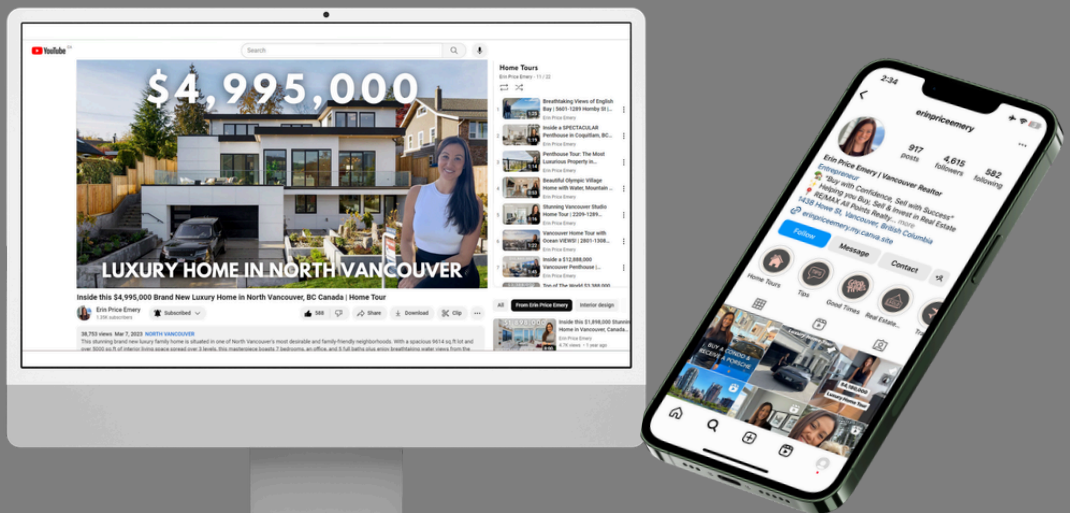
As a dedicated real estate professional, I am deeply passionate about helping clients navigate the complex process of buying a home. Whether you are a first-time homebuyer or a seasoned investor, I provide the utmost care and precise guidance tailored to your unique needs. Known for my trustworthiness, accountability, and attention to detail, I manage all aspects of the home-buying process efficiently, making it as seamless and stress-free as possible. Clients appreciate my helpful nature and commitment to their satisfaction, knowing they can count on me to support their interests and help them achieve their real estate goals.

Selling with Erin

Erin's track record speaks for itself. Having sold over $50 million in real estate through strategic social media marketing in just under two years alone, she is recognized as a true game-changer in the industry. Her innovative approach to digital marketing and her dedication to showcasing properties through high-quality video content have set her apart as the go-to realtor for those looking to buy or sell luxury homes in Vancouver. Whether it's a multi-million-dollar penthouse or a family home in one of Vancouver's top neighborhoods, Erin knows how to get results.

Presales & New Development

Erin Price Emery is highly experienced in presales across the Lower Mainland, bringing unparalleled expertise and connections to the table. Having built strong relationships with some of the region's top developers, Erin ensures her clients receive exclusive access, priority opportunities, and special treatment in highly sought-after developments. As a trusted real estate agent to her investor clients, Erin goes above and beyond, offering her personal attention and years of experience to ensure their goals are met. With her in-depth knowledge of the presale process from start to finish, Erin expertly guides her clients every step of the way, making what can be a complex journey feel seamless and stress-free.



Canada's Foreign Buyer Ban: What's Next?

Proposed changes could extend the ban to 2029 while opening new opportunities for BC's presale market.

"A sustainable housing market isn't just about making homes more affordable today, but ensuring we're building enough homes for tomorrow."

TIA HAUGHIAN
REAL ESTATE ADVISOR

Canada's 2026 federal budget proposes extending the foreign buyer ban until January 1, 2029, with one significant change. Newly built homes would be exempt, allowing international buyers to purchase new residential properties while restrictions on existing homes remain in place. Originally introduced in 2023 to help improve housing affordability, the ban is currently set to expire in January 2027. The proposed exemption could offer a much-needed boost to Canada's housing industry, particularly in markets like Vancouver, where slower sales and reduced demand have created challenges for developers.

For BC, the proposed changes could bring renewed interest to presale developments and encourage investment in new housing. With developers facing a slower market, additional buyers could help move projects forward and support future housing supply. However, BC's separate 20% foreign buyer tax would still apply in designated areas, including Metro Vancouver, potentially limiting the impact of the exemption. While the extension has not yet been approved, the proposal signals an effort to balance housing affordability with the need for new development. It's a policy worth watching as Vancouver's real estate market continues to evolve.

HOME TIPS WITH ERIN
HOME UPGRADES I'D DO AGAIN

(AND AGAIN)

When clients ask me what's worth upgrading, I think about what makes everyday life easier and what buyers will actually notice at a showing. Here are three I'd look at a little differently.

1 THE EVERYDAY WIN

Heated bathroom floors. On a cold Vancouver morning, warm tile is a little luxury you actually feel. If you're already replacing the tile in your main bathroom, I'd price it out. Selling soon? If the bathroom is in good shape, I'd leave the tile alone and point out any heated floors you already have.

2 THE SURPRISE FAVOURITE

Deep kitchen drawers. Buyers open drawers at showings because they're picturing where their own stuff will go. A deep drawer beside the stove that fits the pots and the lids makes everyday cooking easier. If you're planning new cabinets, map out where your most used items will live before you pick the finishes.

3 THE ONE I'D THINK TWICE ABOUT

High maintenance finishes. Glossy cabinets can look gorgeous in the showroom. Now picture them after dinner, with the lights on and everyone's fingerprints on display. Bring a sample home and see how easily it wipes clean. If you're updating before you sell, I'd choose a finish that still looks good by the last showing of the day.
